Last update: December 22, 2011

This guide is based on the 16th edition (2010) of The Chicago Manual of Style: The Essential Guide for Writers, Editors, and Publishers. For further explanation and for more examples, please consult the Manual, shelved in the Reference section of the Augustana Library at REF PN 147 C54 2010.

You can also consult the full Chicago Manual of Style online at www.chicagomanualofstyle.org.

The Chicago style provides two systems for giving credit to the sources you use. Choose either:

1. the notes-bibliography system: use this system to create footnotes or endnotes for specific citations (use column 1a below) and a bibliography at the end of your work, arranged in alphabetical order, that provides full details about your sources (use column 1b below)
OR
2. the author-date system: use this system to create specific parenthetical citations throughout your work (use column 2a below) and a works cited list at the end of your work, arranged in alphabetical order, that provides full details about your cited sources (use column 2b below)

General notes for using the examples in this guide:

- Start by looking for examples that match the types of information you need to cite. If you have any questions, please consult your professor or a librarian.
- In the notes-bibliography system:
 - Notes (column 1a below) are usually structured like this: 1. Author's last name, title or partial title, page(s) cited
 - Bibliography entries (column 1b below) usually contain, in the following order:
 - Author/creator information (see the examples below for scenarios with multiple authors, etc.)
 - Title information (see the examples below for title variations)
 - Publication information (e.g., place of publication, publisher name, and publication date for books; volume and issue numbers for journal articles; URLs for online resources)
- In the author-date system:
 - In-text citations (column 2a below) are usually structured like this: (Author's last name publication date, page(s) cited)
 - Works cited list entries (column 2b below) usually contain, in the following order:
 - Author/creator information (see the examples below for scenarios with multiple authors, etc.)
 - Publication date
 - Title information (see the examples below for title variations)
 - Publication information (e.g., place of publication, publisher name, and publication date for books; volume and issue numbers for journal articles; URLs for online resources)
- Notes, bibliographies, and works cited list entries are always single-spaced (with one space separating entries). See the Chicago manual for examples.
